Olives are harvested in autumn and winter. More specifically, green olives are picked at the end of September until October. Black olives are picked from the middle of October until the end of November. Kalamata olives are collected from the middle of November until the end of December or early January.

Olives are naturally bitter fruits that are typically subjected to fermentation or cured with lye or brine to make them more palatable.

All olives are allowed to ferment before being packed in a brine solution.

Olives can also be flavored by soaking them in various marinades, or removing the pit and stuffing them.

The Green Chalkidiki Olive

Green Halkidiki olives are grown in the peninsula of Halkidiki region of Northern Greece. The deep blue of the Aegean Sea, the bright sun and the fertile Greek land created these impressive and tasty table olives.

The Kalamata Olive

The world famous Kalamata olives with brownish-black color and characteristic “almond” shape have a unique and splendid taste from all other olive varieties of the world. The Kalamata olives grow only in specific regions of Greece and they are considered a special product. Kalamata olives are produced using traditional lactic acid fermentation, with no colouring added during the process.

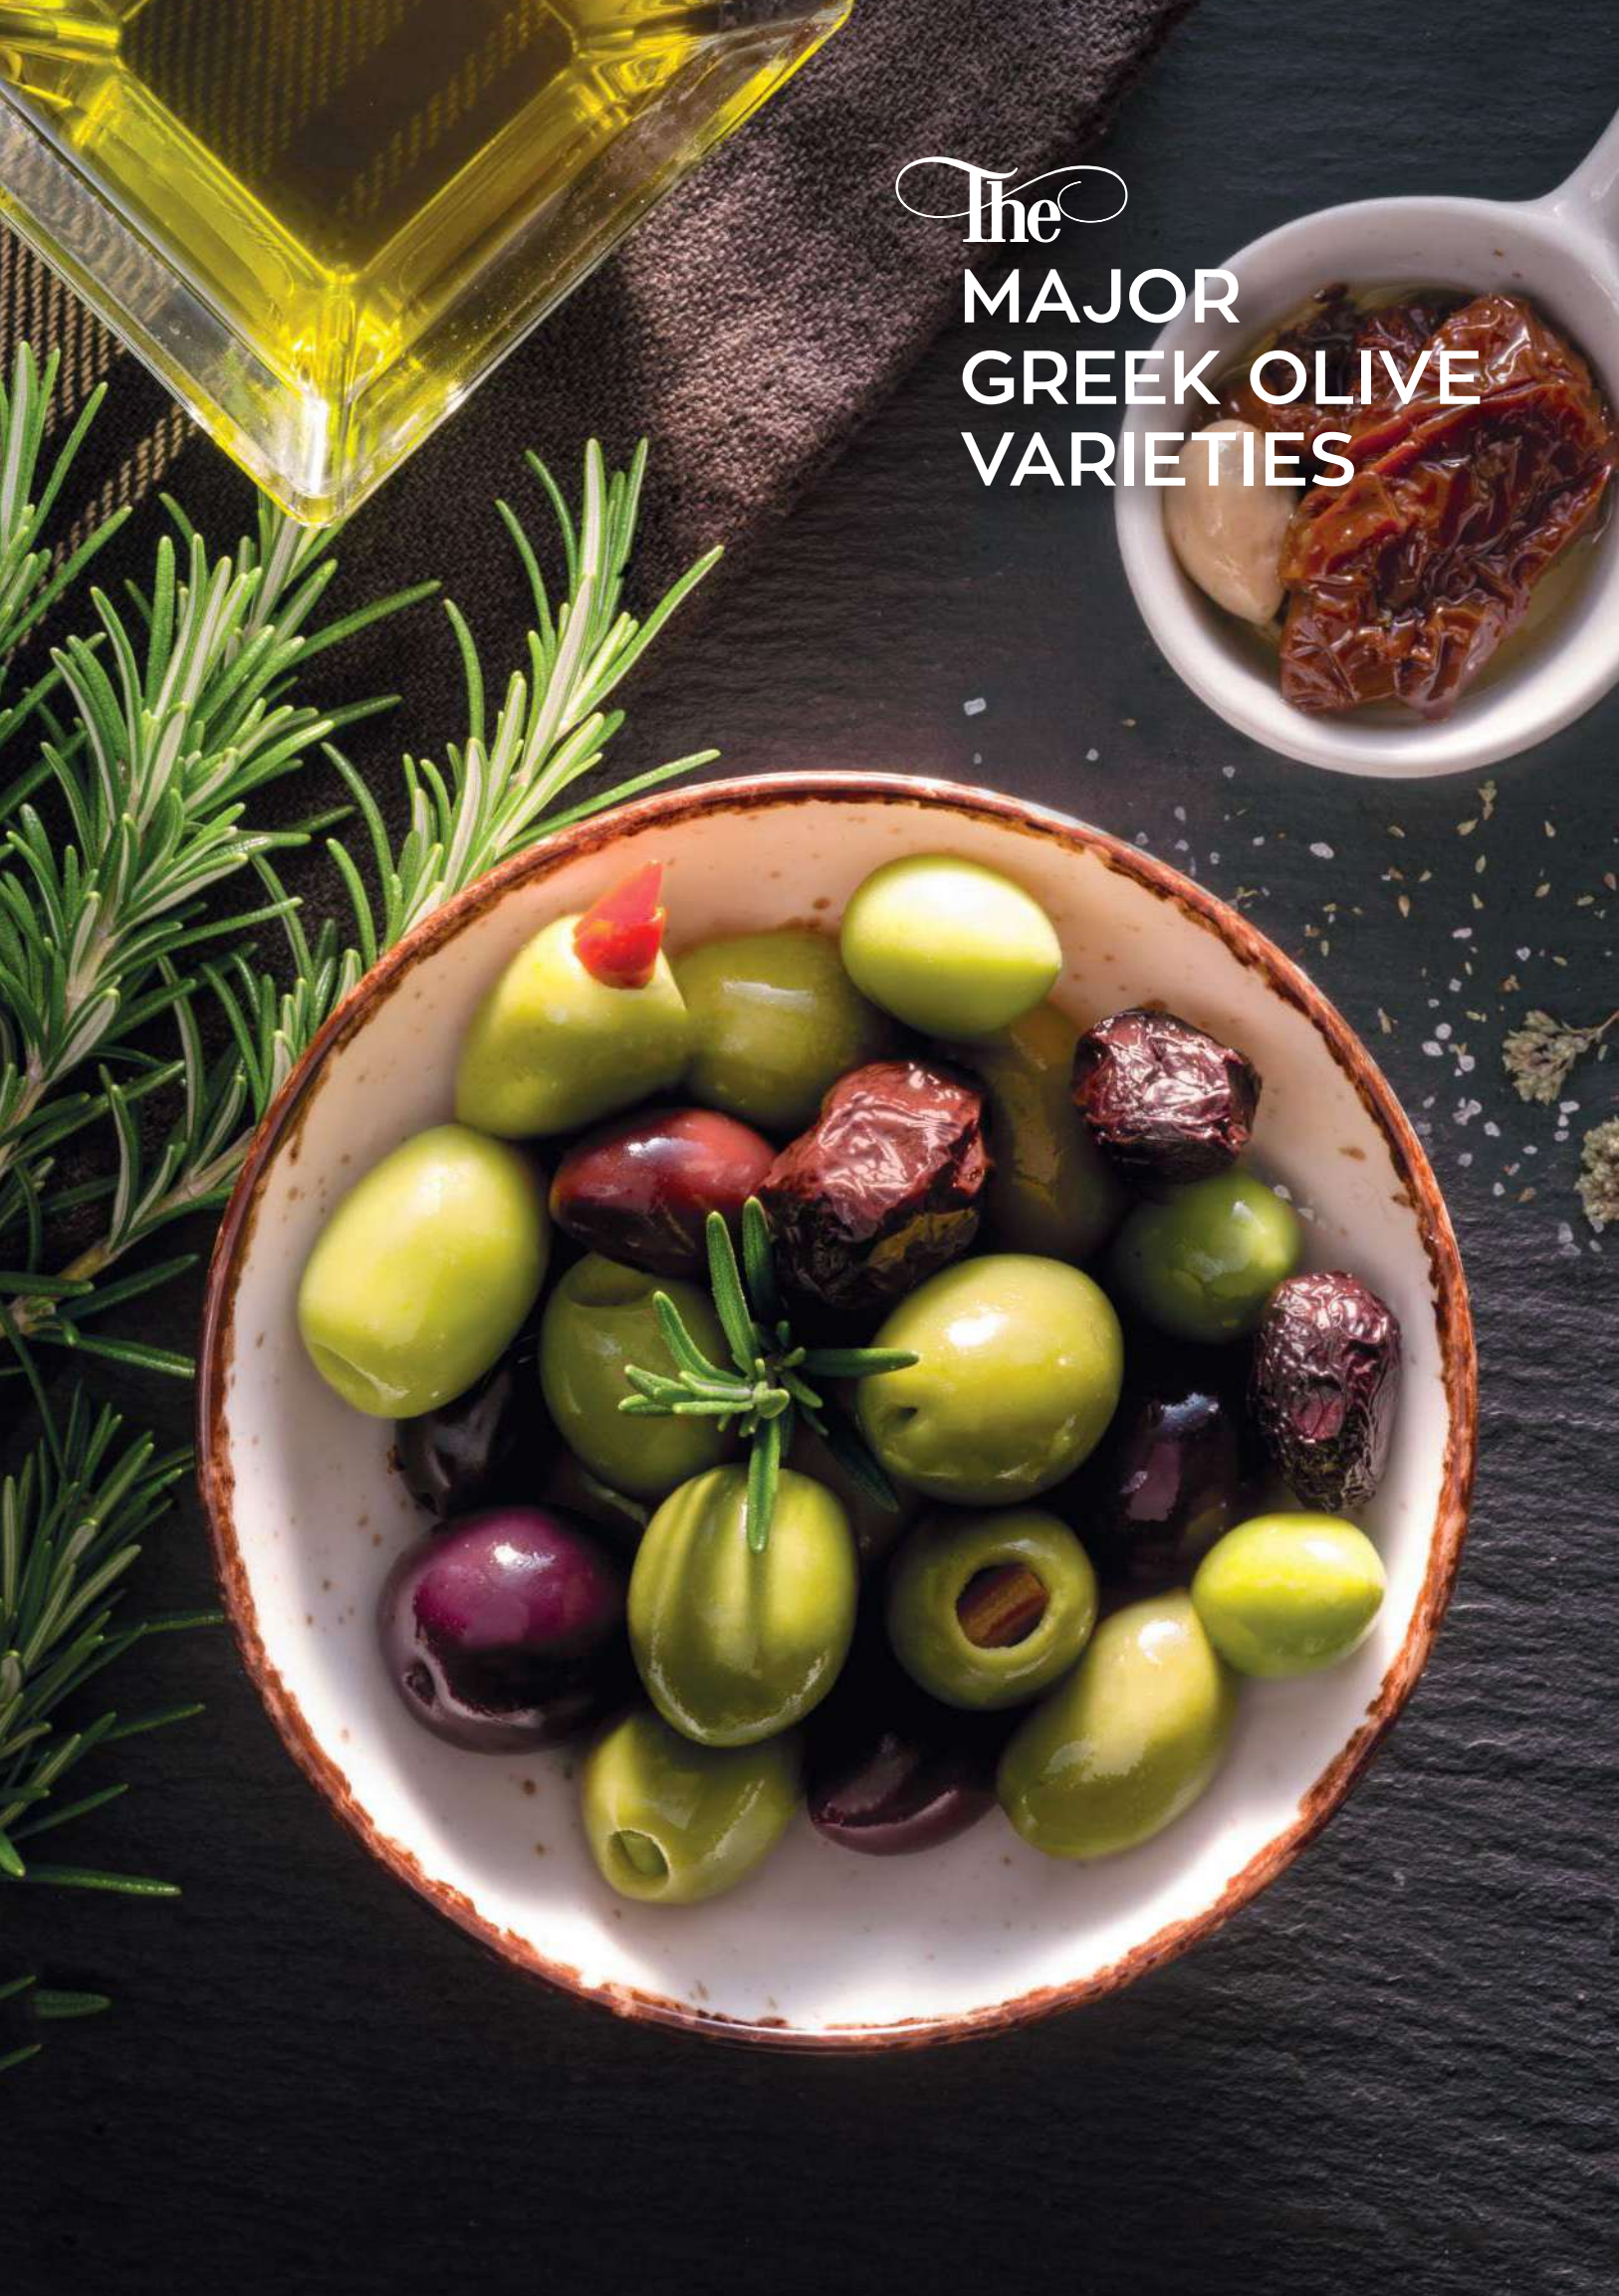

The Conservolea Olive (Green & Black)

Conservolea olives are grown in various places in Greece, mainly in Central and West Greece (Agrinio, Amfissa, Arta, Lamia, Pilio). They are also called Amfissa or round olives (Olea europaea var. Rotund) usually named after the place they are grown. Their shape is quite round and their characteristic is their color variation from green, “blonde” to black, according to their maturity.

Both, black and green olives are particularly known in Greece for their strong flavor.

GREEK OLIVES ... NATURALLY!

In ancient Greece, olive trees were considered pure and sacred.

Nowadays, Greek olive groves stretch from the rugged mountaintops to the Mediterranean Sea. Greek olive trees are among the oldest in the Mediterranean area - over 3,000 years old - and continue to offer their wholesome fruit, both olives and olive oil, to the people of the world.

Our products respect this heritage and bring the Mediterranean diet to your table.

Greek Olives are rich in olive oil, polyphenols and Vitamin E with great antioxidant properties.

THE LARGEST OLIVE PROCESSING INDUSTRY IN GREECE

INTERCOMM FOODS S.A., founded in 1990, is located in the low Thessalian district of Larissa, in Central Greece and is one of the leading Greek exports companies. The company has strong experience in PRIVATE LABEL products, while developing in parallel its main brand DELPHI.

The company's headquarters, warehouse and production facilities cover an area of approximately 160.000m².

There are two factories divisions, the OLIVE factory and the FRUIT factory.

In 1999, the company performed a large investment in the field of olives, with modern installations and state-of-the-art equipment. Through this investment, Intercomm has succeeded to become a leader olive processing company in Greece, with the highest standards, gaining more and more the recognition of the table olives market worldwide.

Intercomm is also a leader in ASEPTIC fruit, supplying peach and apricot to top Clients all over the world and satisfying all quality requirements.
